A STANGE ACCIDENT. - A serious and from its cause a very unusual accident occurred in Philadelphia on Thursday. A young lady, rcsiding on Wood street, Miss Effic De Costa, while walking about her room, stepped upon a parlor match, which ignited, setting her underclothing on fire. She did not hear the explosion, and the flames circling round her limbs gave her the first intimation of her peril. Her screams for help brought to her assistance Miss Hattie Green, who resided in the same house. In attempting to smother the flames her own clothing took fire. O hers in the house coming to the rescue the fire was extinguished, but not before they were both seriously turned. The physicians of the Pennsylvania Hospital, to waich issuitution they were removed, propouno:d their i juries of a fatal character, and at two o'clock Thursday afternoon Miss Green ded in dreadful agony, and Miss De Costa the a xt m rning.
